The question whether honest and efficient city government smould be securely guaranteed to the people, and how such a desirable end could be attained, was forced into the field of State politics, and its solution was demanded of the two great political parties. The Republican party accepted the responsibility. Every forward step has been taken by a Republican Legislature and a Republican Governor. The first draft of a charter for second class cities was drawn by a Republican commission. Afterward revised, it was passed by a Republican Legislature, approved by a Republican Governor, and became the new charter, so called, under which all admit, there are greater opportunities for good government than over before existed, it is, therefore, with great force that the Republican party
